

The British Institute of Human Rights offer bespoke human rights support for people and loved ones accessing services; community groups and advocates; public officials; and policy professionals involved in the field of Special Educational Needs and Disabilities. Workshops for SEND human rights capacity-building or resource creation are open to a max of 45 participants per session and we can deliver support both online and face-to-face.

One-Off

Half day (3 hours) / full day (6 hours) Workshops

Interactive workshops made bespoke for the group attending.

Ideal for: Building confidence and knowledge in human rights law with a focus on a particular issue, setting or right.

Cost: From £435 - £1,360 dependent on workshop length and audience e.g. £435 for a workshop for a small organisation with an annual turnover of less than £100,000

Suggested content: Workshops can be tailored to suit organisational needs but examples include a 90-minute workshop on restraint and human rights; a half day workshop on the right to education; and a full day workshop covering three rights in detail

Lunch & Learn

5 x 45 - 60 minute sessions

A series of short, bitesize training sessions to access over lunch.

Ideal for: Busy organisations or individuals who cannot dedicate long periods of time for training or have a specific interest area.

Cost: With a block-booking discount, prices start from £700 per Lunch & Learn workshop.

Suggested content: A series covering different topics and delivered every fortnight or month to the same group.

Practice Lead Programmes

Delivered over 5 days

A bespoke programme to enable sustained change and confidence.

Ideal for: Teams looking to embed human rights learning and development internally through identified internal Practice Leads

Cost: Programmes fees vary greatly depending on a variety of factors including duration and content.

Suggested content: We suggest 5 days delivered via a blend of half-day online and full-day in-person workshops.

Resource Co-Production

5 x 45 - 60 minute sessions

Co-produced human rights resources to support staff or the people accessing public services.

Ideal for: Organisations looking for bespoke co-produced tools to increase human rights knowledge and confidence to support decision-making and challenges.

Cost: Resource co-production is costed on days of time required. BIHR's day rate is £620. A recent staff human rights toolkit cost £4,000.

Suggested content: See our resource page for inspiration.

Client Testimonial:

"Stimulating and thought provoking. A necessity for all healthcare professionals to ensure safe delivery of person-centred care. Helps you focus on truly individualised care." - NHS Workshop Participant
